Definitions

Alpha is a measure of risk-adjusted returns. A portfolio with an alpha greater than 0 has earned more than expected given its beta (a measure of risk) — meaning the portfolio has generated excess return without increasing risk. A portfolio with a negative alpha is producing a lower return than would be expected given its risk level.

Tracking error is the standard deviation of the difference between a portfolio’s returns and the benchmark or index it was meant to mimic or beat.

Russell 1000® Growth Index measures the performance of the large-cap growth segment of the US equity universe. It includes those Russell 1000® Index companies with higher price-to-book ratios and higher forecasted growth values. The Russell 1000® Growth Index is constructed to provide a comprehensive and unbiased barometer for the large-cap growth segment. The Index is completely reconstituted annually to ensure new and growing equities are included and that the represented companies continue to reflect growth characteristics.

Indexes are unmanaged and cannot be invested in directly.

A word about risk

Collective investment funds are subject to risks and fluctuate in value.

The quantitative models and analysis used by the fund may perform differently than expected and negatively affect fund performance.

Diversification does not assure a profit nor protect against loss.

Large-cap companies may have fewer opportunities to expand the market for their products or services, may focus their competitive efforts on maintaining or expanding their market share, and may be less capable of responding quickly to competitive challenges. The above factors could result in the share price of large-cap companies lagging the overall stock market or growth in the general economy, and, as a result, could have a negative effect on the fund’s portfolio, performance and share price.

Growth stocks tend to have higher valuations and thus are typically more volatile than value stocks. Growth stocks also may not pay dividends or may pay lower dividends than value stocks.

The value of equity securities in the fund’s portfolio will fluctuate. Equity securities may decline in value because of an increase in interest rates or changes in the stock market.
